Wilcom embroidery studio e3 full 80Bridging the Gap: Diffusion of Telehealth into Primary Care. Telehealth (TH) has the potential to solve some of the most vexing problems faced by the practice of primary care medicine. However, adoption of TH technology and strategies has been slow. We sought to determine the process of TH adoption in primary care and identify areas in which further research is needed. PubMed, Cumulative Index to Nursing and Allied Health Literature, and Health Business Elite databases (2007-2014) were searched using keywords related to TH and primary care. The year that the article appeared in peer-reviewed journals was recorded and correlated with the year that the practice was reported as using TH. The search yielded 38 articles, of which 20 were excluded because they were secondary sources, qualitative, or not directly relevant to our purposes. Twelve articles described the application of TH in primary care. Eleven of these (92%) began before 2009. Seven of 12 (58%) authors were from the United States. Eight studies (67%) reported on peer-reviewed journal articles, and five (42%) used an experimental design. Seven of 12 studies (58%) reported implementation costs and five (42%) reported return on investment of the technology. Other identified areas for further research include adoption during transition of care, implementation of e-health in underserved populations, and barriers to providing TH. Challenges identified in the implementation of TH in primary care have led to more basic research, including economic analyses. A framework for implementation that can guide and support TH expansion in primary care is warranted.--- author: - 'Michael Shell, John Doe, and Jane Doe, [^1]' title: 'Bareword Exceptions During Processing in Internet Email, Part I: Decoding Issues' --- Introduction {#sec:introduction} ===== Related Work {#sec:relatedwork} ===== Message Content Processing {#sec:messagecontent} ===== Exceptions {#sec:exceptions} ===== Table-Row Processing {#sec:table-row-processing} ===== Graphical Image Markup {#sec:graphical-image-markup} ===== Headers and Footers {#sec:headers-footers} ===== Conclusions {#sec:conclusions} ===== [^1]: Man f678ea9f9e
