It's your fault for reading this whole thing! As it turns out, not only did they not officially announce a Star Wars name for this game, but LucasArts has been working on a new game in the Star Wars universe that could very well be next-gen, and thus not be this game at all. A new report claims that the game is in fact the long-rumored Star Wars 1313, a new IP that LucasArts developed in partnership with the same people who made Star Wars 1313. 1313 was reported last year and was intended as a Star Wars: Battlefront 2-type shooter in an open-world setting. A working title for this new game was reported last month. Obviously, we don't know if this is what EA and Respawn are working on, but it certainly sounds more promising than a Star Wars spinoff (not that the last one didn't sound promising). The interesting tidbit is that 1313 was apparently already finished when LucasArts was bought up by Disney last year, meaning that the game could already have had a release date while the Disney-LucasArts partnership was still in place. Disney is said to have put strict guidelines on new games released by Disney after buying up LucasArts. Subscribe to Nintendo Life on Thanks, Gamespot.
